Garden Spheres & Sundials

Spheres and armillary sundials are wonderful decorating tools for the garden. They can serve as a traditional focal point in a courtyard or add vertical interest in a bed of low lying plants. You can even turn a sphere into topiary by letting climbing vines envelope the steel form.

Romes Original Armillary Sundials

Offered in a variety of sizes and designs, our equatorial style armillary sundials seem to have dual personalities. The smooth curves and airiness inherent in the designs are sublimely graceful. All the while, the solid, thick castings and forceful arrow gnomon reach to the heavens with stubborn will. Rome armillary sundials command attention, second glances and make focal points in the garden.

These 5 cast armillary sundials are designed to mount on our cast iron pedestals (#B18, #B19, #B26.)

They do not attach to our wrought iron pedestal bases.

About Rome Sundials

For 50 years we have been crafting our sundials as Shakespeare wrote in Henry VI, "quaintly, point by point." Each Rome sundial is individually cast using traditional techniques such as sand casting and then hand finished.

Aside from a few antique reproductions, all Rome sundials are designed by artists in our in-house studio. With over 50 sundials, our products are made for those seeking uniqueness and individualism in their garden. This naturally focuses our sales channel to the independent gift, nature & garden retailer and away from mass merchants. In the never ending commoditization of product, the Rome line of sundials helps keep your store's product selection distinctive.

Our large selection of matching pedestal bases are on pages 12 - 13.

Cast Iron Sundials

In the 19th century a trend developed in Britain and America towards a more affordable alternative to bronze. Cast iron became this alternative material and was responsible for the first garden art to be mass-produced for the middle class. Although affordable, the trade off with cast iron is that it rusts; of course these days, the rust finish in garden art has a large following.

Cold Cast Bronze Sundials

This unique casting technique offers the beauty of solid bronze at a price that is 30% less. The process involves bonding a layer of real bronze to the surface of a polymer and stone composite sundial. After casting, we apply an antique finish to the bronze. The bronze is imbedded into the polymer/stone and will not lift or peel off. As with solid metal, the bronze layer of these dials will naturally weather and develop a beautiful patina over time.

If you want to offer your customers a material that is a step above cast iron, but not quite the heirloom level of solid brass, you'll find our cold cast bronze dials are the perfect choice.
